GETTYSBURG, WEDNESDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 3rd, 1926.

PRICE THREE CENTS

STOLEN MACHINE, THEFT, SMASH-UP PUT 3 IN JAIL

New York Young Men Arrested When Chase Follows Crash Here On Tuesday.

An exciting 23-mile automobile chase, a smash-up, resulting from a crash of an automobile into a telephone pole, and an old-fashioned man-hunt were a few of the main ingredients in a bit of drama enacted here late Tuesday afternoon, with three Binghamton, New York, youths playing the leading roles.

One of the climaxes in the "thriller" was staged at the intersection of York and Stratton streets, at 5:15 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon. This ultimately led to the word "finis" being read to the offering, by the state police, assisted by residents of town, ranging from 6 to 60 years, Gettysburg College students and others.

As the car with the three New York youths endeavored to turn from North Stratton street into York street, the driver had his choice of running into another machine or hitting a telephone pole. He chose the latter alternative, and with a crash that was heard for several blocks, the light roadster smashed into the pole and was wrecked.

Trio Captured
Leaping from the wrecked car, the trio took to their heels, after, it is said by eyewitnesses, one drew a revolver and threatened to shoot. Then the chase began. Darting through yards, alleys and streets, the trio kept "one jump" ahead of their pursuers, until they reached the alley on the south side of East Middle street, where two of the New Yorkers were overpowered by sheer force of numbers.

The third member of the trio kept his heels warm by running out into East Confederate avenue, where he was finally apprehended by Corporal S. S. Mollenkopf, of the state police station here, previously notified of the accident and events which preceded.

When finally corralled in the office of the state police, the trio gave their names as George K. Ray, alias Dorris Shoen, 18; Elijah Watkins, 17, and Harold Sealey, 18, all of Binghamton, New York.

Precipitating the automobile chase which took place before the smashup, according to the authorities, was the fact that the trio stopped at the Hill Top Inn, Shephardstown, for gasoline, and drove away without paying for it. After the tank of the machine was filled, and the proprietor of the place went into the store on some pretexted errand, the driver of the machine started away.

Fail To Pay For Gas
The proprietor of the inn notified authorities at Dillsburg to be on the lookout for the car, and they, in turn, advised the local substation of the state police to watch the Harrisburg road. The notification from Dillsburg and information concerning the smash-up at St. James Lutheran church were received almost simultaneously by the local troopers. The Dillsburg authorities arrived at the scene of the smashup shortly after it occurred, and assisted in the chase which followed.

According to alleged confessions given the state police, the trio confessed that they stole the roadster at Scranton, where they had gone from Binghamton, after having procured a set of New York automobile license plates. Returning to Binghamton, the youths said they robbed the Bill Gately pool and billiard parlor, and started southward, with South Carolina as their objective.

When each of the three lads was searched, their clothing gave up the following:

Ray: 32 calibre loaded pistol, one black-jack, one pearl-handle knife, and a miscellaneous assortment of trinkets and letters.

Sealey: One pearl-handle knife, fountain pen, pipe, pair of pliers and screw driver.

Watkins: 1.65 in change, 4 pearl-handle knives, fountain pen and three necklaces.

Food and Smokes
In a compartment in the rear of the car was found eight cartons of cigarettes, four cans of corn beef, one razor, two boxes of cigars, one partly filled box of cigars, matches, box of (Continued on Second Page)

ADAMS SCHOOLS MAKE ENVIABLE MARK DURING '25

School Days Prove "Golden Rule" Days In Pennsylvania Survey Shows.

School days proved "golden rule days" for Pennsylvania boys and girls during the 1925 school year for out of an approximate enrollment of 1,835,594 there were 137,151 of them who made perfect attendance records. Adams county's record was reported as unusually good.

In announcing these records, officials in the department of public instruction said an increase of 10,597 was noted over the previous year, which they asserted was remarkable because of "wide-spread epidemics of contagious diseases in various parts of the state during the 1924-25 term." Each pupil is issued a perfect attendance certificate by the department and awarded a seal for each year of additional perfect attendance. Department officials point out that the number of pupils who attended the year's school without missing a session is greater than the total enrollment in each of the states of Arizona, Delaware, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Rhode Island, Utah, Vermont and Wyoming.

Perfect attendance records in schools under supervision of district superintendents included: Allentown, 1,229; Altoona, 1,556; Bethlehem, 1,096; Bloomsburg, 161; Bradford, 269; Chambersburg, 491; Coatesville, 317; Conneville, 302; DuBois, 394; Easton, 494; Erie, 1,059; Greensburg, 429; Hanover, 147; Harrisburg, 1,137; Hazleton, 437; Johnstown, 895; Lancaster, 884; Lock Haven, 80; Meadville, 250; New Castle, 1,229; Oil City, 369; Philadelphia, 6,063; Pittsburgh, 2,627; Pottsville, 277; Reading, 1,990; Scranton, 1,256; Sharon, 856; Titusville, 70; Uniontown, 423; Warren, 370; Washington, 329; Wilkes-Barre, 1,165; Williamsport, 693, and York, 719.

Carload of Adams County Antiques Shipped to New England Town

Gettysburg is "carrying coals to New England."

New England, world famous for its collection of antique furniture, some of it dating back to the days of the Puritans and Pilgrims, has come to Adams county to replenish its supply.

A carload of antique furniture was shipped by three local dealers today, consigned to a capitalist at New Barrington, Massachusetts, who plans to use it in furnishing two homes of colonial design and antiquity.

To the casual observer here, the carload of old furniture would have been classed as so much junk. To the purchaser, it had a net value of more than $1600 in "cold cash," and he is planning to spend many hundreds of dollars more in having it refinished and dressed up, after it reaches its destination.

He spent several days picking it out of the antique stock of the Graeffenburg Antique Shop, where an elaborate collection has been assembled by Postmaster Robert C. Miller in the last few years since he took over and renovated the famous old hostelry along the Lincoln Highway, near Caledonia; from Charles H. Hess and Sons, who have been in the refinishing business in Gettysburg many years, and from W. E. Jacobs, antique dealer of York Springs, whose fame has long since spread far beyond the confines of Adams county as a collector of old furniture and novelties.

The collection in the carload shipment included "high boys" and "low boys," four-poster beds, some with canopies, but mostly without; table sinks, corner cupboards, cottage beds, old rugs, old tables galore, porch benches and what not, much of which had long since been discarded by Adams county's thrifty and prospering people to make way for the more modern and up-to-date designs of furniture. "There is increasing evidence on every hand of a demand in New England and elsewhere for specimens of the early work of the cabinet makers of Adams county, some of our early settlers having been the best in that business anywhere in the world in their day," one of the dealers who shared in the harvest of New England money, told this newspaper today.

"Furniture made from pine, walnut and maple in the early days of this community—more than 100 years ago—is especially in demand," he added.

Antique dealers are already making plans to attend the public sales on Adams county farms this spring, for it is there they come across some of the finest specimens of the early period workmanship, and they are usually able to buy choice pieces "for a mere song."

"Many people phone us that they have specimens of old furniture we might want," the dealer further stated, "but invariably an inspection reveals that the piece the person has in mind has no value as an antique. But usually, in looking around the place we visit, we can find something most valuable that makes our trip profitable to both the seller and us," he added.

CONVICT BOLEN OF MURDERING FAIRFIELD MAN

Jury Finds Verdict Of Guilty In Second Degree After 24 Hour Argument.

Roy Bolen, Clark county, Washington, farmer, was found guilty of murder in the second degree, for the slaying of Walter Fleming, son of Mrs. F. C. Fleming, Fairfield, last July. Fleming's headless body was found August 3, in the Vancouver river.

The jury hearing the trial deliberated nearly 24 hours before reaching a decision and at one time reported to the court they could not reach a decision. The court returned them to their jury room for further deliberations and a second degree verdict was reached last Friday afternoon. News of the jury's verdict was received in Gettysburg today. No report was made on the number of ballots taken by the jurors before reaching their verdict.

The case went to the jury last Thursday afternoon and deliberations started at once. Friday afternoon, shortly after the noon hour, word was received that the jury wished to report. Attorneys for the defense and prosecution conferred with the court and shortly after 3 o'clock a poll showed a report from each member that they were unable to agree.

Was Deadlocked 6-6
A half hour later the jury was deadlocked at six-six. The court prepared further instructions and ordered them to continue with their deliberations in an effort to reach an agreement.

Throughout the long hours of argument over the probability of his guilt, Bolen, the accused man, sat staring straight ahead, without a change of expression or an indication that he even heard the appeals of Judge Miller or Attorney Hall, in an effort to save him from conviction or to convict him. The defense asked for acquittal. The prosecution asked for conviction in the first degree.

If the jury found a verdict of guilty in the first degree, the penalty would also be fixed by the twelve men, death or life imprisonment being at the option of the jurors.

Mrs. W. C. Fleming, Fairfield, was in Vancouver for the trial.

BOROUGH LOSES SUIT INVOLVING STREET PAVING

Jury Deliberates Two Hours And Returns Verdict Favoring Defendant.

Edward D. Hudson, veterinary, one of the 22 Hanover street property owners, won his case brought by the borough of Gettysburg in court this afternoon. The jury, which returned its verdict at 2:15 o'clock, after deliberating two hours, returned a verdict in favor of the defendant, who was one of 22 property owners on Hanover street, who has refused to pay his street paving assessment. While Mr. Hudson, a veterinary surgeon, was personally thanking each member of the jury for the verdict, Attorney J. Donald Swope, borough solicitor, filed motion for a new trial.

Goes To Jury At 12:18
The case was given to the jury at 12:18 o'clock this afternoon, followed by a conference between opposing counsel and Judge McPherson.

The court was asked by Attorneys Swope and Hersh to give binding instructions to the jury to return a verdict in favor of each side. The court recited the facts and his interpretation of the law, as it applied to the facts, to the jury for consideration.

Both the plaintiff and the defense attorneys admitted that the case involves many points of law, each contending that its interpretation of the law as it applies to those facts is correct. It is contended by the plaintiff that there is no recourse at law in refusing to meet the municipal liens, and that any protest against the street paving should have been presented before the work was finally accepted by the borough.

Defense Contentions
The defense contends that the work does not represent "substantial performance" of the contract for the work, that it was not done under the plans, specifications and requirements of the state highway commissioner of Pennsylvania and that their right to refuse to pay for the work is based on the present condition of the street, which, they say, bars it from the class of permanent improvements.

The court instructed the jury to the effect that, if it deemed the paving job "substantial performance" of the contract, it should find a verdict for the plaintiff; otherwise the defendant should be given the verdict.

The case of Edward H. Hudson, Hanover street, was tried. It was stated by Attorney Hersh that, in respect of the verdict, the other 21 (Continued on Second Page)

ORGAN RECITAL PLEASES CROWD

Beautiful Effects of St. James Instrument Splendidly Interpreted by J. Herbert Springer.

The quality and power of the new Austin organ at St. James church were exhibited Tuesday evening in the recital by J. Herbert Springer, organist of St. Matthew's church in Hanover. The program, selected entirely from the large volume of legitimate organ music, was varied in style and period, the works of Bach, Schumann, and Widor using the substantial and essential foundation stops, and the more modern compositions using those which are more purely ornamental and which make of the present day organ a veritable orchestra.

Mr. Springer opened with the famous "St. Anne Fugue," founded upon the St. Anne tune, which, usually set to the words "Oh, Where Are Kings and Empires Now?" is included in every worthy hymnal. Upon this majestic air, John Sebastian Bach, the greatest genius in a family which during several generations counted two hundred musicians, built an elaborate superstructure, the playing of which is the test of the ambitious organist. Mr. Springer played with ease and spirit, using in the great climax the full power of the organ.

Interesting Contrast
The following number, "Largo e Spiccatto," by Wilhelm Friedmann Bach, one of the sons of John Sebastian, offered an interesting contrast. The lovely melody and the delicate accompaniment showed the possibility of tender and beautiful effects. The Prelude by Clerambault who was a contemporary of the elder Bach had a quaint, yet delightfully fresh quality.

In "The Bells of St. Anne de Beaupre," by Alexander Russell, there is an opportunity to use the recent additions to the organ such as the echo organ, the harp and chimes. St. Anne de Beaupre is the Canadian Church to which thousands of pilgrims resort each year for healing, and the composer has represented the ringing of the bells, the gathering of the throng, the chanting of the choir, the church service, the benediction, and the bells heard at last from far away. Modern in character and pictorial in style, it is one of the compositions which make it unnecessary for the organist to take refuge in the poor and the weak and the unreligious in order to satisfy the taste of those who do not care for so-called classical music. Another and more beautiful though less ornate number by the same composer gave in music the impression made upon the observer by the lonely majesty of the Saguenay River.

The "Sketch in F Minor" by Robert Schumann was written for full organ, with a melodious part for the flute and string stops. Mr. Springer's performance was nowhere better than in this beautiful composition. The Intermezzo which followed, the work of a Belgian organist, was entirely for the flute stops.

Negro Spiritual
The negro spiritual, known to musicians for many years as America's only original musical product, has recently become generally popular. Mr. Springer played organ arrangements of two spirituals, "Deep River" and "Nobody Knows the Trouble I've Seen," and in these there was wide variety of registration, another illustration of the fact that it is not necessary to go outside the music appropriate to the church to use the modern church organ.

The concluding number, the Toccata from the Fifth Symphony, by Charles Marie Widor, exhibited like the first number the skill of the organist. Written almost entirely on the full organ, staccato throughout, and intended to be played rapidly and without pause, it formed a brilliant conclusion to an excellent program.

Gettysburg may well be proud of the possession of so fine an instrument, as well as of so able an organist who because of his attendance at the college and his frequent visits here may be claimed as a member of the community. Mr. Springer is still a young man and his concert of last evening promises a musical future of length and distinction.

The audience is estimated at five hundred. It is hoped that sufficient interest may be shown in the town so that recitals of this kind will be a regular occurrence. The presence of five hundred persons is an encouraging sign; the vacancies were a cause for regret that others missed the opportunity of hearing a fine organ well played.

ing addresses to the jury of Attorney Swope for the borough and Attorney Hersh for the defendant property owners.

Hanover street was paved with an 18-foot roadway in the fall and early winter months of 1922. Since then seventeen property owners have paid their street paving assessments, while 22 others refused to pay. It is said by an attorney that the property owners who paid their paving assessments, if done without protest, could not recover the amounts they paid, if the jury verdict favored the defendant.

MANUEL BEACHI.

Hannaford MacNider, Assistant Secretary of War, has been inspecting United States Army posts with a view of checking up on premature burials. After three days effort, Captain George Fried, of the U. S. Army, rescued all the crew of the freighter Albatross in mid-Atlantic. Rev. A. C. Jarvis, of the U. S. Army, and Manuel Beachi, Mexican diplomat, was silent on remarks by the United States and Mexico after an extended tour of European capitals.

ALLEGED SOON SEEKS FORTUNE

Body of Abe Hummel, Well Known New York Lawyer, Expected to Arrive Tonight.

(By Associated Press.)
New York, Feb. 3.—The body of Abe Hummel, well-known New York lawyer, who died in self-imposed exile in London, leaving $1,000,000 fortune, which is now claimed by a hitherto unrevealed "son," was due home today.

The body was shipped on the steamship Olympic which is due tonight and funeral services probably will be held tomorrow. Henry D. Hummel, a bakery cart driver, of Portland, Maine, who claims he is the son of the noted criminal lawyer, has announced his intention of attending the services.

It is understood that Hummel left his fortune to two sisters with the money to revert to a nephew, Abe Kaffenburg, of Paris, on their deaths.

It was Haffenburg's denial of the existence of a son that led young Hummel to press his claim that he is the legitimate heir of the Hummel fortune. The Portland man says that his mother was Lelia Farrell, the singer, and that Hummel married her secretly and that he is their son. His mother died when he was 5 years old. To help prove his claim, young Hummel is growing a mustache in order to increase what he believes is a close facial resemblance to the late lawyer.

Attempt To Evade Jury Duty Rebuked

Carlisle, Feb. 3.—Pleading conscientious scruples in a request to be excused from jury service in quarter sessions court here drew a sharp rebuke from Judge Edward M. Biddle, Jr., when George W. Bear, North Middletown township, asked to be relieved of service.

Bear is a member of the Reformed Mennonite church and it was while he was attempting to explain jury service was a practice contrary to his faith that Judge Biddle ordered him to take his seat, saying, "We will have no explanation."

Nearly half of the twenty-three cases listed for trial this week in the regular February criminal court have been disposed of.

Set Fire To Home After Taking Silver

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—After ransacking the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Foreman, thieves set fire to the dwelling and escaped with $500 worth of silverware and clothing. Firemen extinguished the blaze with little damage.

Mrs. Foreman left her home early in the morning and returned shortly after 1 o'clock, to find that the house had been afire and all of her silverware stolen.

Fire Lieutenant Toner said oil-soaked rags distributed about the house had been ignited. According to the police, the thieves entered through a rear window.

Deer Is Rescued From Drifting Ice

Elkton, Md., Feb. 3.—John Anderson, district deputy game warden for Cecil county, has just brought into this town a six-month-old buck deer which had been rescued from drifting ice at Popular Point, near Charlestown. The little fellow had evidently been hard pressed in a chase, and when rescued he was so exhausted he could hardly stand.

The district warden estimates that there are at least fifty deer running wild in Upper Cecil. From all parts of that section come reports of full-grown pairs of deer in sight. They are said to be offspring of deer on the Bell farm at Conowingo. When Mr. Bell removed from Cecil county some time ago the animals were allowed to escape, and in spite of the ravages of dogs the herd has increased.

A barren tract, extending from the Pennsylvania line diagonally through Cecil county to Chesapeake Bay, is said to be an ideal place for a game reservation. Much of it contains virgin timber and the rest is covered with second growth. It is thought the deer have found refuge in there.

candy and two pounds of "doggies." The wrecked car was removed to the Gettysburg Garage, and the trio lodged in the Adams county jail where they are being held pending disposition of their cases by the district attorney. It is thought probable that the three youths will be held for Birmingham officers.

Ray and Watkins, according to their alleged confessions, served time in New York jails for wrong-doings there.

DELAY ACTION ON RESOLUTION INVOLVING COAL

Move to Ask President to Intervene Held Over Until Next Week; Seek Expense Statement.

(By Associated Press.)
Harrisburg, Feb. 3.—Anthracite mining, prohibition enforcement and state finances during Governor Pinchot's administration again came to the front today in a brief session of the general assembly.

New resolutions calling for presidential intervention to end the coal strike were presented in the house and held over until next week. At the same time administration coal bills were reported by the house mines committee with a negative recommendation.

The Senate received the administration prohibition enforcement bills and reported them for action next Monday night and Governor Pinchot simultaneously wrote to W. Harry Baker, Republican state chairman, asking him to disclose the Republican organization's attitude toward these measures.

The financial situation was brought up by the Senate adoption of a resolution calling upon the auditor general to furnish detailed figures of state expenditures for the Pinchot administration and preceding administrations, to supplement information asked by the legislature yesterday.

Both Senate and House adjourned until next Monday night.

Woman In Race For Lieutenant-Governor

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—Mrs. Frances Moser Hocker, of Germantown, announced Tuesday in a letter to J. Crawford Johnson, Montgomery County Republican chairman, that she would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor from Montgomery county. Mrs. Hocker is the wife of Edward Hocker, editor and historian, and the daughter of E. S. Moser, editor of the Collegeville Independent.

The platform on which Mrs. Hocker will seek nomination is "Pennsylvania for Pennsylvanians, a Republican administration, tax reforms and disarmament." Mrs. Hocker is a lineal descendant of Jacob Moser, signer of the first draft or Constitution in 1782; of James Smith, of York county, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and of Abraham Smith, a Representative in the General Assembly from 1784 to 1790.

The slogan under which Mrs. Hocker will campaign will be "For the State Constitution, for home and for family."

Thinks Studio Chair Is Death Seat In Prison

Pittsburgh.—The speed with which the wheels of justice move in Allegheny county was very much overestimated by Peter Romanik, aged 40, of McKees Rocks, when he took a photographer's chair for the electric chair while being examined in county headquarters here.

Romanik, unable to speak English, was held in connection with the fatal stabbing of John Kirpa. He was escorted to the Petition room where his photo was to be taken. A brother accompanied him. Both became greatly excited when Romanik was placed in a chair. Romanik, in the belief that the photographer was about to execute him, held up his hand to stay the proceedings. He talked with his brother for a moment, handed him his purse and watch, and then shook hands in farewell.

Detectives finally convinced Romanik that he would survive the picture-taking ordeal.

GRADE STUDENTS, SAFETY PATROLS

Lock Haven.—Formation of safety patrols from upper grade boys who post themselves at crossings before and after school to see that younger children are not subjected to hazards of crossings in front of advancing automobiles has been effected by two schools in this district.

Both Mill Hall and Castanea have well-drilled groups of ten or fifteen boys. These are divided into senior and junior platoons in charge of a first and second lieutenant. A captain in each school directs the work. The move was sponsored by the Lock Haven Motor club.

Costly Wedding Rites Are Banned By Governor of Constantinople

Constantinople, Feb. 3.—Fathers of marriageable daughters have found a real friend in the governor of Constantinople province. He has promulgated a law restricting in great detail expenditures allowed in connection with weddings and forbidding many of the picturesque but costly features which have been part of Turkish weddings for ages.

The purpose is twofold—to encourage marriages and to prevent waste in this time of national economic stress.

YOUTH

Old times, gold times,
Times when we were young,
Where's the song that can compare
With the songs we sung?
Melancholy middle-age
Looks across the way
Telling hearts were lighter then
In its month of May.

Old times, bold times,
Times before a care
Had come in to weight us down,
Oh, but they were fair!
Then we danced to merry tunes,
Unlike those today,
Now we cannot keep the time
When the fiddlers play.

Old times, gold times,
Times of mirth and play
But the songs would still be sweet
Could we sing today.
Mirth keeps tripping down the way,
Laughter isn't dead,
Yesterday our hearts were young,
Now our youth has fled

Old times, bold times,
Dearly are they kept.
Oft our heads have bowed to care,
Often we have wept.
We may tell them as we will
Of the songs we sung,
They would rather sing today
Who today are young.

HEALTH TALK

The health talk of the Pennsylvania Department of Health is prepared this week by W. L. Stevenson, chief, Bureau of Engineering. Mr. Stevenson says:

"A picture was recently published of a man with a harp sitting on a cloud marked 'Carbon Monoxide.' He was singing a song, 'Oh, I Ain't Gonna Drive No More.' It was entitled, 'The Fellow Who Kept the Motor Running in a Closed Garage.' That picture was a sermon in itself.

"In the winter especially, people are prone to be more careless in handling their automobiles in garages than they are in the summer time. If, of course, is much nicer and certainly more comfortable to start a car in a warm garage than to open the doors and let the zero atmosphere come in.
But it is many times safer to do the latter. And for this reason.

"The combustion processes in your automobile possess an unseen and deadly menace which is freed through the exhaust pipe of the car. It is called carbon monoxide. This gas is colorless, odorless and tasteless, but kills those who do not have the proper amount of respect for its powers. In one city alone during the winter months, many deaths were directly traceable to this cause alone.

"Tinkering with your automobile while the motor idles in a closed garage is inviting death. Starting an automobile under such conditions is being most gracious to serious illness.
Remember it is better to breathe a little brisk and life-giving zero air than to absorb the fumes of carbon monoxide. If you do the former, you will be able to appreciate and enjoy the flowers of spring; if you do the latter, you may get flowers sooner, but you will not be able to smell them.

Look out for carbon monoxide!"

SEEK REASONS FOR T. B. CASES

Physician Seeks Reasons Why Adults Become Affected With Tuberculosis.

Philadelphia.—Reasons why some persons who have escaped a touch of tuberculosis in their childhood become infected in adult life with fatal results are being sought by Dr. E. L. Opie, director of laboratories of the Henry Phipps Institute, connected with the University of Pennsylvania, who is conducting research in various stages of the disease. Dr. Opie is regarded by physicians as one of the outstanding authorities on tuberculosis.

Less than two per cent of the population escapes a touch of the "white plague" at one time in their lives, chiefly in childhood, he says. The most unfortunate are those who have escaped it and then become infected in adult life, for they have not become self-vaccinated and developed immunity. With them the disease is apt to be quick and fatal.

X-ray photographs have shown, Dr. Opie has demonstrated, that 98 per cent of the white adults who die from diseases other than tuberculosis have in their lungs small, hard spots through which the X-rays do not easily penetrate. These have been shown to be deposits built up by the body around points of tubercular infection. This type of infection occurs chiefly in children, but the hard nodules continue in the lungs through life.

Develops Resistant Fluids

Apparently this type of childhood infection, Dr. Opie explained, causes the body to develop resistant fluids which attack fresh infections of tuberculosis, and for the most part destroy them. How this resistance is sometimes overcome by the disease in adults is now the object of research Dr. Opie is directing.

In adults the disease takes a different form, as a rule, usually appearing as a more diffused infection of the top portion of the lung. Latent infections of this type have been found by Dr. Opie in the lungs of one of every five white adults examined. In every case latent infections of this type are accompanied by evidence of the childhood type of infection, no longer active.

Active tuberculosis of the lungs also is always accompanied by evidence of childhood infection. Dr. Opie says, but evidence of the early infection in those who die of tuberculosis is almost always less extensive in those who die of the disease than in those who do not develop active cases.

In some instances, where infection occurs in adults similar to the childhood type, general dissemination of the disease throughout the body occurs because the adult has not been made resistant by infection acquired during childhood, Dr. Opie claims.

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES

Harrisburg.—A total of 25,965 bushels of certified seed potatoes were grown in five Pennsylvania counties in 1925. The growers confined their efforts to two varieties, Russel Rural and Rural New Yorker. The harvest in Bradford county totaled 6,375 bushels; Cambria, 9,875 bushels; Erie, 2,000 bushels; Somerset, 6,815 bushels, and Sullivan, 900 bushels.

WOOL MAGNATE ENDS OWN LIFE

William M. Wood Shoots Himself Through the Mouth, Near Daytona Beach, Florida.

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 3.—William Madison Wood, 68, wealthy New England wool manufacturer and former president of the American Woolen Company, died here Tuesday by his own hand.

Leaving his automobile at a lonely spot above Flagler Beach, the aged manufacturer told his servants he wished to stroll alone through a by-path. A few moments later the report of a pistol was heard. A chauffeur and valet hurried to the scene and found Mr. Wood dying from a bullet wound in the mouth.

A coroner's jury, hastily empaneled, returned the verdict that Mr. Wood had died by a bullet wound self-inflicted. The manufacturer had suffered from ill health for several years. This was the only motive advanced for the act.

With Mrs. Wood he had been a guest at Hotel Ormond here for the past month. In addition to his wife, he is survived by a son, Cornelius A. Wood. Another son, William M. Wood, Jr., was killed in an automobile accident four years ago.

Forest Fire Hazards Turned Into Alcohol

Harrisburg.—Forest fire hazards are being turned into wood alcohol and by-products up in Elk and Forest counties where two plants are turning out approximately 570 gallons of alcohol daily. The wood used is known as slashings, which is largely trimmings from lumbering operations.

An account of these distillation plants by Charles E. Baer, district forester at Emporium, said they used about 557 cords of wood daily. Each cord yields approximately 10 gallons of wood alcohol, 200 pounds of grey acetate of lime used in the manufacture of smokeless powder and acetic acid and 45 bushels of charcoal.

After the saw logs have been removed the hardwood slash is cut into cord size for the chemical plants. About 15 cords to the acre are obtained and everything is used including limbs with a minimum diameter of three inches.

Black Rock Said To Be Coal, Expert

Harrisburg.—Black rock found near Hanover, York county, has been diagnosed as coal by Dr. George H. Ashley, state geologist. The specimen was unearthed during the digging of a well but Dr. Ashley advises against "wild excitement" of a new find, pointing out that it is of the Triassic age, and has proved mineable in Virginia but not in Pennsylvania.

The geologist calls attention to the fact that east of the Alleghenies coal is found in only a few places outside the Broad Top and the anthracite fields. He said that sometimes the coals of the Triassic age reach a thickness of between six inches and a foot in Pennsylvania but that no coal of this age has been found workable in the state.

Society Leader Reigns, But She Doesn't Rule

MRS. JOHN B. HENDERSON, Washington, D. C., who unquestionably wields the scepter of the ultra ultra in capital society, is one of those modern sovereign queens who reigns but does not rule. Mrs. Henderson has issued decrees at various times against short skirts, smoking, drinking alcohol, eating meat and the encroachment of apartment houses on aristocratic residence streets. She built a palace for the vice presidents and offered it for their use rent free. She sought to dub Sixteenth street the Avenue of the Presidents.

Did she put over any of these pet ideas? Not one!

But her throne is as firm as ever. Her vigorous opinions are listened to with undiminished respect. Her company is sought as eagerly and invitations to her home are prized as highly as ever. So this clever and wealthy widow of 81 holds court in her "Boundary Castle."

"There is no doubt that people are becoming worse," she tells a visitor in one breath. And in the next she says keenly, "You know I intend to live to be 100."

Mrs. Henderson's latest ukase was against knee length skirts.

"I am afraid I have some of the blood of the reformers in me," she says. "But when I go through the streets and see girls with flesh colored stockings which extend unveiled to the edge of their cloaks, and see men watching them and see the girls self-conscious and with the air of not being quite first class, I think it is time to protest."

"The fault is with fashion. I have been foolish myself and have obeyed when corsets and sweeping trains were in style. It is conceivable that if fashion should set for girls the costume of a South Sea savage, they might submit for the sake of following the pace. We must demand of designers that their styles be modest."

Convincing proof that Mrs. Henderson reigns is the popularity of her invitations. It is an adage that no visiting dignitary, foreign or domestic, has been received in Washington, regardless of the White House, until he has been a guest at the Henderson castle. Yet she never serves meat at her table, and her wine cellar was smashed spectacularly years before prohibition. Guests at her "at homes" receive ice water instead of spiked punch. But both men and women guests assert their rights by smoking, and she no longer protests.

Her effort to bar apartment houses from her street ended in a compromise. She had given a valuable tract across from her home to the city for a park, incidentally preserving her view from obstruction.
